I'm not sure how many of you have read the recent posts about the edge of my house but I finally just got the courage to tell you. I won't go into why I was hesitant to tell you because that's a whole different conversation. But basically, I know it's been an emotional conversation for all of us because there have been questions of "how far" and "how bad" and what I expect out of a contractor. Let me just say that the current state of my house is awful. My gut feeling, my instinct was to just mow everything down as fast as I possibly could because everything is total sh*t. I wanted to get the hell out of there and the emotional toll of how badly this place needed me to be "fixed" was just too much to bear. I'm not sure why, but it still pains me to sit here and think that my house is in need of me and then think of the fact that my house is in need of me is the same thing as thinking that I am in need of myself. I knew that I was starting to lose myself when I said to myself "you aren't supposed to be in a situation like this". I would definitely say that I'm in a situation that is not in my best interest. I'm still very, very upset about a lot of things. I'm not sure if I'll ever get over the guilt I'm feeling for letting this continue for so long. My house is falling apart. The back yard is turning into a bomb shelter. The front yard is a disaster. The back yard is a big lawn of dead grass and rubbish. The front yard is just a big pile of decaying plant material. It's a big old mess and I feel like a total failure. I feel like I'm not good enough. I'm not sure if it will ever get better. I'm moving to BC soon. We'll be in a new city with a new home, a new

My mother passed away in 2005 with the diagnosis of stage four triple-negative breast cancer, it was sudden and devastating. I was only two weeks old when she was diagnosed and left behind just my father, her parents, me and my identical twin sister. It was a difficult time for all of us. I was a toddler. My father and my sister were both still teenagers. I've never really had the ability to express my emotions or seek help because I was too young. I became extremely angry and vengeful for the first time in my life, I did a lot of odd things, I made so many bad choices, I robbed, stole, and ruined my life in many ways. It was a long battle with trying to figure out who I was and how to get my life back on track. I'm now 18 and I've been off and on my medications for a year now. I'm sober and have been for months and I've been clean for the last 6 months. I've been an addict for 16 years and that's an addict that's in recovery for 5 months. I suffer from depression as well. My father and sister are now both in a more sober place and I'm working on finishing school and moving on with my life. I've struggled with my weight issues ever since my childhood, I've also been on and off drugs for the past 5 years and have a major eating disorder. So, I've been through so many different things. I've lost many good friends, I've had to find others, and I'm learning how to be more mature and patient with others. I feel that this site is a good way to express myself when I feel like I'm suffering from depression. I've been diagnosed with General Anxiety Disorder and a mild case of Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder. My mom called it having bipolar disorder. I've been open to the idea of medication. I don't know if I'll ever be able to fully accept the medication because it's hard for me to go back to the place I was but I'm trying to do it. I know I'm still an 570a42141b
