It has an "Import" function that will import a text file of email addresses, then you can use the app to send mail to all of them. You can set it up to use your smtp server. Otherwise I'd recommend EasyMail Pro. It has great text-to-email conversion features and is an opensource commercial program. A: I have been using MailGuru for this purpose. It has an import wizard that walks you through the process step by step, providing all options for the SMTP server. Here's the link to the export wizard: Q: Getting a groovy warning from nagios I am running Nagios 4.4.2 and got a warning from it about my /etc/nagios/nrpe.cfg file. We all have had a moment when we receive an email with a text in capital letters. (Guilty) We all have seen people who switch to the wrong mailing-list, and can't get their message because they can't understand the captcha. (Yes, I'm looking at you) (PS - I hope they gave you the correct password in the first place...) There are often people who answer to spam messages without reading the captchas, and the spammers go on sending messages without any kind of security. (Most likely) (Now, I'm looking at you) (You should change your password, or you will get even more spam in your inbox.) With this "KEYMACRO" you can receive mails and see if the message was tampered with, or if you can find your personal information. You can test it with the attached example. We have opened the Mac version of the software so you can test the feature without installing it. If the email message is open in a window, press cmd + c to copy it. If you press cmd + v you will paste it in the password box of the "I Can't Decrypt" function, for example: username@domain.com Paste the email message into the "I can't decrypt" box. Keymacro will ask you for your Key, and you just have to type your password. No need to share your personal information with a third-party... Here you can see an example of a mail which has a simple CAPTCHA (Explanation : Even a mail from a secure e-mail server cannot fool a program, and the CAPTCHA is not the only security) A mail with a simple CAPTCHA (Example): From: xxxxxxxx@xxxxxxx.com To: Yours E-Mail Subject: Re: xxxxxxxxx.com Good afternoon. We can do business only if you are ready. You are right, it is me. I am very sorry. Best regards, xxxxxxxx You will get a mail similar to the example one, but you will be able to read your password in the "I Can't Decrypt" box. You can play with this Keymacro, for example with the CAPTCHA's examples: I can't decrypt: x I can◆ 1d6a3396d6
