Cheers and goodbye, SoftDesigner.Q: Setting up webapp on remote machine (Windows 7) I have a web app running on tomcat and I have installed it on my local machine. I need to set it up on a remote machine that I will connect to over a VPN. I was wondering if I need to deploy tomcat on the remote machine and how I could go about doing that. I would like to set it up on the remote machine in the same way I did it on my local machine so I can use it over the VPN. Thanks in advance for any help A: You don't need to install Tomcat on the remote machine. What you need is the JRE and the software your server requires. It's best to install these on the same machine as your web server. You will need to install the Java Development Kit or JDK for the Operating System you are running. This is the core package for all Java development tools. The JDK includes the JRE. The Java Runtime Environment or JRE is just a set of libraries that provide native code compatibility for Java applications. These can be downloaded separately for Windows here. If you only have access to a Windows machine, this is a good place to start. If you have access to a Linux machine, you can get the packages you need here. If you don't have a Java Development Kit installed, you can get a free one from Oracle here., 28 Tai Psc, 28 Amelie, 28 Yuki, 28 Andree, 26 Flora, 28 Sylphine, 28 Mermaid, 29 Tahitian,
