Ana Maria Archila, a co-founder of Code Pink, and other activists from the organization moved the streets to get to Pelosi's office, calling for a vote on immigration reform. Archila and other activists were waiting at a rail-road crossing when they were arrested by police. "We have to shut down the government to get what we believe," Archila said to protesters in her own speech at the time. "We are not going to let members of Congress into any of our districts if we are going to be in Congress. It's time that we put our bodies on the line." She said that when she and other members of Code Pink saw Pelosi's office, they wanted to call for a vote on immigration reform. She said they do not want to see any member of Congress remain in office if they do not hold a vote. Archila said she was arrested about 15 feet from Pelosi's office because the protesters did not want to force their way into the office. "I am really disappointed in her," she said of Pelosi. "I think she's making a huge mistake." WTOP's Dave Jackson and The Associated Press contributed to this report.Q: Mysql - How to split fields between insert into multiple rows?
