Q: SonarQube crashes every time i run my website on VPS I run a small website. I have installed sonar-server on my Ubuntu 12.04 VPS. When i run my website on VPS, sonar crashes and i cannot access to the website. Any help will be appreciated. A: There is a bundle of information you may find useful: You need to configure the HTTPHost property in the your sonar-project-config.properties file of your sonarqube server. Here is a description of it and you have to set your HTTPHost with your local ip or host name: httpHost=localhost It is mandatory to set the sonar.web.host property with the http host IP. The invention relates to a manual switch for a window lifter, having at least one operating housing, a manually operable, rotatably mounted actuating element and a switching element which is contained in the operating housing and is connected to the actuating element by means of an actuating rod that extends transversely to the direction of rotation of the actuating element. Switch devices of the type mentioned above are provided, for example, in a hydraulic window lifter. The actuating element is manually rotatable in the operating housing and acts directly on a switching element that is connected to the actuating element by an actuating rod that extends transversely to the rotational direction. The switching element is disposed, in the known switch device, at a certain distance from the axis of rotation of the actuating element so that a torque applied to the actuating element by hand rotation of the actuating element causes rotation of the actuating element and the switching element that is connected thereto in the switching direction. An electromagnet that interacts with an electrical switching contact is connected to the actuating rod. In order to connect the switching element to the actuating element in the switched-on condition of the contact, the actuating rod is located in a gap in the switching element that is magnetically permeable. Thus, a magnetic flux path is formed between the actuating element and the switching element and the magnetic permeability of the gap is higher in the switched-on condition than in the switched-off condition. The magnetic flux induces a switching current in the switching element that is connected in series to the actuating element. The switching current leads to the switching of the contact and thus to the switched-on condition
