Chondrosarcoma of the mandible is extremely rare and is usually considered to be an aggressive tumor of high malignant potential. Only five cases have been reported in the English-language literature. In this article, the authors report the seventh case in the literature and the third case of chondrosarcoma arising in the mandible. The tumor arose in a 39-year-old woman who presented with a painless mass that had been present for two years. Histologically, the tumor was composed of uniform, round to polygonal cells with abundant finely granular cytoplasm and oval nuclei. The tumors cells were arranged in sheets, solid nests, and trabeculae. The tumor cells showed strong immunoreactivity for vimentin and focal positivity for S-100 protein, indicating that this tumor was histologically similar to benign chondroma.Maturation of Na+ current and its blockade by amiloride in myenteric neurons of guinea pig ileum. We have used whole-cell voltage-clamp recording in order to study the development of the sodium current in myenteric neurons of the guinea pig ileum. Neurons were obtained from animals aged from 1 to 28 days. The sodium currents were measured at voltages ranging from -10 to -90 mV after a conditioning pulse to -10 mV. During the first 3 weeks of postnatal development, the peak amplitude of the sodium current remains small. Only after 6 weeks does it reach half of its adult value. The time course of the development of the sodium current resembles that of the potassium current. The slow activation process is shown to be responsible for the smaller current in the immature
