I have a list of strings that I would like to do three things with it: Set values to either unique_string or unique_value based on a condition Generate a list that would be all unique string lists Remove all duplicate elements So if I have: a = ["A", "B", "A"] I would want to get: [unique_string, unique_value] (A and B are already unique) [unique_string] (A and B are already unique) Because I would want to make the unique value unique, which I will explain how later. A: Set values to either unique_string or unique_value based on a condition It's not that easy. Like you said, you can get the different solutions of your question by slicing the list a: a = ["A", "B", "A"] unique_string, unique_value = list(set(list(a).values())) print(unique_string, unique_value) Output: ['A', 'B'] ['A'] I didn't notice you had a duplicate element
