Don't let rain or lack of daylight keep you from practicing!We have listened and learned from the mistakes of the first version of FPV Air, this sim addresses the major issues and solves all of them!Most realistic flight physicsThrough closer involvement in the FPV racing scene and inceased flight practice using the latest FPV quad's we have come up with a flight model that matches the feel and physics of modern FPV racing better than any other simMost customizable flight physicsDepending on the power and weight of quad a pilot is used to flying, a realistic flight experience can vary greatly from person to person. The flight model has been made accessible to users via an array of variables and parameters which pilots are free to tune and tweak. This allows pilots to match perfectly the expected performance. No other sim allows users to alter the physics of the flight model in such depth and magnitudeBest possible performance on low-end machinesThe sim has been tested and runs with a steady framerate on a US$200 laptop! Many FPV racers don't have high-end gaming rigs, so unlike all the others, FPV Air 2 is not super resource intensive, this sim aims to allow players on huge range of computers to fly smoothly!ConfiguratorRates, expo and other flight controller settings are all done through a familiar configurator interface based on the popular Betaflight interface. - Part 2 Shunji Endo Part Two The Portrait and the Paint Job The cry echoed from the old house nearby. The other men who lived on the street had also heard the “I’m tired”. In that house lived a strong man whose arms could hold enemies down. Another man lived there who was more sensitive to sound than anyone else. Only him and his daughter heard the cry. He opened the window and they heard the sound of footsteps. Someone was trying to enter the house. The warning came long enough that Man decided to rush to the door. However, it was a little late. When the door hit him, the old man was out for the count. Man dropped to the ground, his knife fallen in the dust. Misty fell into a fit. Shunji hadn’t been inside the house for a long time. He entered upon hearing a cry for help. He then spotted the old man on the floor and yelled, “It’s me! It’s me!” Man jumped to his feet. That was the attack. The first thing Shunji did was to contact the men who lived together. No one else lived at this house. The attack was not only unexpected, it was due to a man who didn’t live there. It could have been an even more shocking surprise, except for one thing. Shunji sat his horse instead of being on foot. And he brought a set of armor with him. His mail shirt, guard, and equipment. Wearing the mail didn’t make the armor useless. Having the gear boosted his strength and the chance of hitting someone. That would be the key to winning in this battle. Thinking that way, Shunji hit the door, his metal hand creating a powerful blow. The door flew to the ground. The force of the blow was too large for the hole not to have gotten bigger in the process. Shunji dug his metal hand into that hole, his entire hand staying in. A tiny amount of dust flew into the air and became a thin cloud. The question on Shunji’s mind at that moment was, “Why did he tell me to die?”. The ring stuck out of his hand. The small weight of it fell out when he took the hand from the hole. He had no idea
