Working with Layers

Photoshop uses layers to create the result of your image, instead of relying on the layers in a traditional printing process. A layer is simply an area of the image that can be altered without damaging the surrounding areas. You can use layers to create a mosaic effect, by arranging different images as layers or put images over one another. Photoshop layers are also useful for retaining control over individual images while making them work together, as well as saving you from having to redo entire areas of an image because of changes that only affect one part of the overall image. For example, after you make some changes to a photo of a person, you may want to keep the portrait of the person, but alter the background to suit a location in which the photo was taken. The easiest way to do this is to use layers to selectively change the background color of a portion of the photo.

Although this book discusses layers, it doesn't cover layer functionality in Photoshop in detail. If you're not familiar with layers and how to use them, check out Photoshop CS3 For Dummies (Wiley).

Creating a New Image
When you open Photoshop, you see a screen that appears similar to Figure 3-1. The next step is to create your image by clicking the New button from the Photographers Toolbox. You'll find more information on this button in the following sections. To get to the New screen, choose Image⇒New. FIGURE 3-1: The New screen's top tab shows the location of different tools and toolsets. When you click the New button, the New Image dialog box opens. You can create a new image from any of your previous images, from the contents of a folder on a DVD or CD, or even from a blank area on your hard drive. The

Q: ¿Cómo aplicar una condición a un objeto en JS de esta forma? Tengo la siguiente duda. ¿Cómo puedo aplicar una condición en JS por medio de un objeto? Por ejemplo si tengo un string `string = '567'`; ¿Puedo aplicar una condición a ese objeto para determinar si este es un número? Ejemplo: `if (string.is_number == true) { console.log("Si es un número"); } else { console.log("No es un número"); }` A: Es la misma:

if (typeof string ===
"number") { //Funciona para
números } Y también podrías
compararlo con el valor arrojado por parseInt: if (parseInt(string, 10) === 567) { //Funciona para
números } #ifndef(BOOST
