On-field radar data, which is collected from all FIFA 22 players, helps EA create the most realistic accuracy ratings for all players in all situations. Next-generation agent motion data is also leveraged to provide extraordinary team and player animations, and to unlock new features and abilities. "With FIFA 19, we wanted to present the most realistic gameplay experience ever for the FIFA franchise, and we think we achieved that goal," said Larry "L.J." Jacobs, Executive Producer for FIFA. "We're bringing players the greatest football experience on PlayStation 4, by integrating additional content into the core game. With "HyperMotion" technology, we're building on this foundation by harnessing new technologies and data to offer players even more of their favourite sport on their favourite gaming system.”

New Focus on Match Flow FIFA 22 features a unique match flow that provides a fresher, more realistic soccer experience. Online players will take centre stage in FIFA’s redesigned Draft mode, which enables the entire community to draft the player they want to build their new team around, and boasts a new progressive review system that allows players to revisit their Draft picks’ strategy over many months to turn them into a winning line-up. As gamers win, earn, and evolve in FIFA 22, they’ll be able to directly influence the narrative – and the game – by participating in new dialogue choices in the Career mode. FIFA’s Career Mode is where you’ll build an elite team of professional players by taking charge of the team and making the key personnel and transfers decisions over a season. The new “Level Cap” system gives players a series of challenges, objectives and set-piece moments that reward them for their efforts. All this culminates in an epic league that's the biggest in the game, and a final, tournament-like, playoff against an all-star team to be crowned the FIFA Champion.
