Protects sensitive files and passwords with cloud backup, enterprise file sync, secure file sharing, encrypted remote access, high availability and more. Protect your data This richly featured web-based file vault lets you define unlimited storage containers (folders), as well as access credentials to them. Data is stored in encrypted files within your individual containers. Additionally, you can define users' access permissions and share containers and files with your colleagues and/or other users. Backup data to the cloud You can save securely encrypted backups of your documents, passwords or other files. Data is stored in a vault in the cloud, and is viewable and downloadable from any web browser. Share files with the people you trust Advanced container sharing and secure file sharing functions make sharing files with your colleagues and contractors a breeze. Protect your internet connection Disable unused protocols, restrict specific IP addresses or set up a firewall to safeguard your data on the web. Get direct access to your data Provide your staff, contractors and other users with instant web access to your data. Generate secure and self-signed SSL certificates as needed. Compare to other products Encrypts sensitive documents Keeper Desktop is one of the leading desktop applications on the market to protect files, passwords and logins. This article will discuss the proper use of keys, the secure Internet connection, and the common attacks on the Internet. Encryption: There are essentially two ways to encrypt data: Symmetric Key Cryptography Public Key Cryptography The term "symmetric" means that a given key (typically a long number) is used for both encryption and decryption, whereas the term "asymmetric" means that a single secret key is used for encryption and decryption, but a different key is used for each. Symmetric key algorithms are "strongest" for two reasons. First, they are very easy to implement, and second, they provide very strong security. Let's Encrypt: The free online public-key infrastructure was developed by the "Internet Security Research Group" a group of people from major Internet companies including Google and Mozilla. The purpose is to create a decentralized way to get a simple HTTPS certificate issued to your domain. There is no control from any root certificate authority. Private Keys: Private keys are used as a seed that gets combined with a public key to generate a cryptographically secure key. If an attacker is using a brute-force attack,

I didn't study all the subject line, but it is one of my favorite programs I use regularly. So, I thought I would check this out. I didn't study all the subject line, but it is one of my favorite programs I use regularly. So, I thought I would check this out. Cool, I will consider it. I am not very familiar with random passwords - I always use a strong password that I can remember. I use strong passwords too for my google accounts, bank etc. I have not had any experience with this program but I know a lot of people use it and it does work well for them. I use Keeper Desktop to encrypt and password protect all my personal computers. Most of the computers I use are at home, but I also use my work computer for my 9-5 and this program can be used for both. Best wishes, Joey _____ "Sometimes it is better to light a candle than to curse the darkness." ~Ralph Waldo Emerson Cool, I will consider it. If you are using random passwords, you shouldn't have any problems. I wouldn't recommend this application, but, if you are using a computer with a small screen, this app might be worth checking out. (The name Keeper is also a very common word in the English language: Keeper, Keeper of the gate, etc.) I would suggest a desktop version of this. I do own a desktop version (Keeper Desktop Classic), but, I found the software very basic and not very user
