Speak to the guard Story: Having escaped from prison, a man (?) ends up in a small cubicle where a light shines right on him. The light is slowly getting brighter, and the man starts seeing things. He's trapped in a dark room, with no way out! If you like video games, your eyes probably bug out a bit when they see a review for 8/10. That's not an average review. No, it's not the best review, nor is it the worst. It's a perfect score. Seriously, it's right in the middle. That 8/10 is about as good as a developer can get. 2018 1st Place - The Best of VR Arcade "A free-to-play, social, open world, action-adventure game with a taste of Bizarro World." If you've never played anything with a kitchen sink or ascii art, you are in for a treat. We love to explore planets, but no one would choose to live on one of these planets. Ok. It probably looks pretty and exciting, but in reality, you are stuck on a planet that looks like hell. Literally. There are also a few flaws (more on that below). The fact that we fell in love with this game before being given a problem statement makes us think that the entire game could have been completed in an hour or less. But let's start with the good. If you're looking for a good, fun

Bizarro World theme, this game has it. Everything you see and everything you do in this game is also seen in this world, no matter how crazy it looks. A baby riding a dragon? It's actually a baby dragon! The main character shows up as a 5-foot tall humanoid with an unfunny stick figure head (just like us). The rooms are designed so you can just climb up to the ceiling and even on to different planets, level by level. You can flip the ceiling upwards to reach the next level, but the first part of every level is a small-ish lobby and a water area. You also have the option of using the bike you start out with in the lobby. There are a handful of courses that you can

Small Business Spotlight Insider Info for Replacing Plastic With the rise of plastics, shoppers can be confused about what is and isn't safe. Read up on the dangers of using plastics, and how to avoid them, with this report from the U.S. Chemical Safety Board: "Many plastic products contain ingredients such as phthalates, bisphenol A, and formaldehyde," the Board states. "These chemicals are associated with adverse health effects, including cancer. It is difficult to avoid phthalates because they are found in many consumer products, such as nail polish. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) set current action levels for some of these chemicals that are behind the eight ball because China is still allowing their use." Some examples of plastics you should avoid are those made of bisphenol A, a synthetic estrogen used in some cosmetics and plastic food packaging. Bisphenol A-containing products can have adverse effects on unborn children. A literature review of studies shows that bisphenol A has a probable carcinogenic effect in animals. It is also associated with decreased male reproductive success and reduced male sperm quality. The EPA has current estimates of negative health effects linked to phthalates, which is a synthetic organic compound used in the manufacturing of plastics. Phthalates have been found in millions of products, from human medical products, such as needles, IV tubes, diapers, plastics in toys, and textiles, to food and drink packaging materials. The EPA lists three phthalates as of most concern: DEHP (the most commonly used phthalate) MEHP MEP In 2015, the EPA identified DEHP as having a mutagenic effects in bacteria and as a possible carcinogen in animals. It is negative for endocrine disruption, according to the Agency. Are you confused about plastics? The EPA has created a resource page about plastics including this helpful list of questions about plastics in consumer products you might ask before you spend your hard-earned dollars: What is a plastic? What are the names of the most common plastic types and where do they come from? What is the chemical structure of plastic? What are the most common chemicals in plastic? What health and environmental effects does plastic have? What should I know about the environment and health effects of non-plastics? What should I know about the
