I don't know the css here, but I'll make sure to add it to the page header and footer. Mijo Papic Mijo Papic (born 1960) is a Croatian American fashion designer, specializing in the design of women's sportswear and leather. He has designed collections for many fashion houses including Giorgio Armani, Emanuel Ungaro, Versace, Bottega Veneta, Neiman Marcus, Vivienne Westwood, Donna Karan, Kiton, Joseph Abboud, Louis Vuitton, Salvatore Ferragamo, Victor & Rolf, Emilio Pucci, Prada, Zegna and Missoni. He is credited with creating the leather jacket of the 1980s, in partnership with Renato Balestra and the leather jackets worn by actors Demi Moore and Sharon Stone in the early 1990s. He was also the founder of Papic Studio, one of the first retail boutiques for sportswear. Early life and education Papic was born in 1960 in the United States, to a Croatian father and an American mother, who had fled from a plane that was shot down in 1943 during World War II. Papic said that "a family friend on my father's side gave me my first sewing machine, and I learned to sew at age four. I could sew pretty quickly and did a lot of alterations for my aunt. Most of her clothes were hand-me-downs, but somehow I managed to get a few. I remember sewing a pleated skirt as a kid." He was inspired to become a fashion designer after seeing the premiere of the 1981 movie Flashdance, where Jennifer Beals wore a red leather jacket. When Papic was 24 years old, he left his native United States and moved to Italy where he completed a fashion design course at the Brera Academy of Milan. Career In 1982, Papic moved to New York and in 1983 opened a clothing boutique at 37 Washington Street. Papic launched his own label, Papic Studio, in 1987, which specialized in menswear and sportswear. His career was launched with his black-leather jacket and a number of leather bags, which were sold around the world. Papic received press attention for his leather designs. He was one of the first designers to feature a leather jacket in his spring collection. The design won the CFDA Designer of the Year award in 1988. e79caf774b

UICollectionViewCell, including last cell.
I've also tried to reloadDataItemAtIndexPaths:

my collectionView is reloaded properly. But it refreshes all UICollectionViewCell, including last cell. That's expected behaviour. You shouldn't be setting the cell in `-collectionView:didEndDisplayingCell:forItemAtIndexPath:`. You should have a setter method to set the cell's contents, such as `-setContent:`. A take-off from an airplane involves complex body motions as the pilot moves a control wheel (e.g., a collective pitch control

Help us build our library!Q: How to have the cross platform utility classes in ASP.NET Core project? I am trying to develop a cross platform application using ASP.NET Core. I have decided to use .NET Standard instead of .NET Framework for this purpose. Now I have this scenario where I need to have a utility class that is the base class and it is going to be the same for both Windows/Windows Store and Mac/Mac OS application. So now I am thinking of writing the utility class and make it available via nuget in .NET Standard project, but when I do this I get a compile time error saying:
The using directive or the namespace declaration for "Microsoft.Extensions.PlatformAbstractions" is missing. I read that this is because the nuget package doesn't have Cross platform support as it is the Microsoft's default package and it doesn't exist for Universal applications, and this is true. I have two questions How to have the same utility class across platforms? Even if I have to write a generic utility class then what is the best way to do this? A: Even if I have to write a generic utility class then what is the best way to do this? Create the class like below

public class MyClass :
IMyClass { public string Name { get; set; }

The name of the property should match that of the attribute. How to have the same utility class across platforms? As you mentioned, you need to create a shared project and add this code to it. Use this technique to separate all platform-specific code. To create a shared library you need a target framework. You can create a class library targeting .NET Standard without any specific features (at least not yet) Create a class that looks like this:

public static class StringUtility { /// /// Get the last index of a string containing a specific character. /// ///
