New Hospital Offers VR Therapy and Oncology Patients 'Attention on Them' June 28, 2014 With all the buzz about virtual reality, is it possible that there are some who can benefit from VR therapy? Therapy WithVR.com is the first company to offer immersive VR therapy to oncology patients in the United States. The solution is designed to help patients deal with what can be extremely stressful situations by placing the individual in a virtual reality setting. In terms of cancer, the VR therapy offers the ability to see patients' disease sites and bones—such as tumors or fractures—in a virtual reality environment. Dr. Dennis Berger, a medical researcher and founder of Therapy WithVR.com, thinks there are three reasons why VR therapy can help patients. To begin with, Dr. Berger has performed a great deal of his research in the area of oncology. As a member of the Medical oncology/Radiology department at Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center, Dr. Berger focused on treating a number of different types of cancer, including treating patients for colorectal cancer. Beyond his research, Dr. Berger has worked alongside a number of other clinicians to help develop new systems that are both safe and effective. With this in mind, Dr. Berger learned firsthand about the process of using VR therapy. This process helped determine VR treatment for Dr. Berger to offer patients at the first VR-oncology center for cancer patients in the United States. Third, Dr. Berger is one of the most experienced clinicians in the U.S. in the area of using Virtual Reality in the treatment of physical and mental health conditions. Dr. Berger's experience ranges from treating post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) to helping patients cope with cancer. His latest project is to help patients overcome post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) by using virtual reality to help patients learn how to be safer in emergency situations. Moving past his research and treatment of patients, Dr. Berger still is involved in discussing clinical applications for VR therapy. For instance, Dr. Berger has performed trials using VR for depression. When it comes to VR therapy for cancer, patients still have a lot of concerns about how to maximize the use of VR therapy for their condition. With that in mind, Dr. Berger and his team have focused their research on integrating the best practices for VR therapy for cancer. Dr.
