What's New In?

Can a Facebook "Like" Button Help Generate Traffic? A new "Like" button on your website can help increase traffic to your Facebook page and even get more Facebook "Likes". But before we get too far into this subject we must remember that if you do not use a "Like" button on your pages then you may lose some Facebook "Like"s. This also goes for other social media buttons such as "tweet", "repost", etc. Some consider Facebook "Likes" as a valid measure of a user's opinion of a specific page/content. If you are familiar with the old form of Facebook rating you may recall that an "In Need of Help" button was attached to the top of the page as well as to individual posts. Many consumers clicked on this button thinking this meant that they were actually reading the content on the page. Of course, this approach was often false - the average consumer used this method to read the post only to rate the page. Now let's assume that all those who liked or voted on your page liked it because it is funny or the information on your page is very useful, and one clicks the "Like" button for the post. Now what happens when you click on the "Like" button for the post again? If your page has "Like"s associated with it the system will remember that you already liked the page and once you refresh your page the button will reappear. This is what is known as a "social voting" and is basically a way of Facebook users rating a page or product. If the button does not appear again there is a chance that you actually did not like the page or content. On a positive note, you can also

"dislike" a page. A "Like" button is different from a "Rate this Page" button because it
