Xml2Json Converter is an easy-to-use application developed in Java, which you can use to quickly turn XML source code into JSON format. Wrapped in a clean and intuitive interface, the tool can also produce XML code from JSON files. Convert XML code to JSON format, or vice versa There are two types of files available for download: a large one that contains all dependencies and should be used if you don't already have Java Runtime Environment installed, along with a smaller one that consists of a single JAR file and runs only if you have JRE. The interface is represented by one window with two buttons for indicating the source and output file, together with another button for beginning conversion. As described by the popup file browser, you can convert either XML to JSON or the other way around. Intuitive interface with straightforward options The whole operation is as simple as possible, requiring you to specify the destination and name of the new, converted file in addition to the source. Xml2Json Converter supports large files and has minimal impact on system resources consumption. During the operation, you can see how much time has passed since the task was started. If the output file already exists with the same name, then it asks for permission to overwrite it. Otherwise, you can just cancel the task to set a new output name or location. The program's activity gets recorded in a log file that can be later opened to retrace your steps and find out when conversions were made. Fast
