Visual CertExam Suite 3.4.2 By Joop2001.rar Crack InfoQ: What are the differences between these methods of using 2-photon entanglement? I am trying to understand the differences between 4-state and 2-photon entangled states, and I came across 3 methods of using 2-photon entanglement. In 1-Photon Scattering the particles the photons just "bounce" off of each other and the entanglement doesn't happen. In InCovariant QED Entanglement the entanglement happens when the particles collide. In Homodyne Entanglement the entangled particles are free-streaming and at some point are measured. According to my understanding, in all cases 1 and 2, the particles in the entangled state are moved by an external force (particle-particle interaction). In the first two cases, the two particles are inseparable, and the photons simply are not separable. In the third, the two particles interact as a whole and they are inseparable, while in the 4-state case they are separable. Is my explanation above correct? A: It is correct, but you need to take into account your vocabulary. The photon is not "inseparable", it is in its spin-space, it is a coherent superposition of spin-states, or properly speaking, it is "entangled" between spin and momentum. So, if we consider a photon pair, we cannot speak of "particles" anymore, we need to consider the "state of photon pairs
