based on the successful FSX Team Up VR mod. Iodine is added to table salt for sanitation purposes, and is also a required ingredient for human health. Iodine is used to stabilize the thyroid hormone (T3) in a number of drugs and diagnostic tests. It is also used in radiology to stimulate thyroid gland function. It is used in thyroid hormone therapy for the treatment of hypothyroidism. Iodine is used in food processing to inhibit the growth of bacteria and fungi. Sodium iodide is used in the iodization of table salt for sanitary and nutritional purposes. It is also used in the thyroid gland in treating thyroid cancers. Iodine-131 is the most common radionuclide for producing diagnostic images and therapeutic treatment of thyroid disorders. Iodine is used in the treatment of thyroid diseases, the process of birth control, the preservation of food and the production of steamed foods. It helps protect humans against thyroid and other cancers and helps maintain healthy teeth and bones. Iodine is considered the most significant and essential dietary mineral for humans. If one does not consume enough iodine, then the thyroid gland, which is located in the pituitary gland in the base of the brain, either stops or cannot produce enough hormones to control one's metabolism. In the U.S., 15 million people have thyroid disease or a pre-existing condition. Another 15 million have inadequately functioning thyroids and are treated with therapeutic doses of synthetic thyroid hormones. According to the U.S. National Research Council (NRC), the recommended daily intake of iodine is 150 mcg. This mineral is essential for the production of thyroid hormones, which regulate metabolism in the body and regulate the rate and extent at which the human body converts food into energy. The quantity of iodine in the body is measured in milligrams (mg) of iodine, which is converted to micrograms (μg). In addition to being critical to the production of thyroid hormones, iodine is a requirement for the production of thyroxine (T4) by the thyroid gland d41b202975

by VR Review Team Take to the mothership with a firey-hot VR adventure set in the decrepit halls of a post-apocalyptic bar where a mysterious robot has kidnapped the uptight baristas and replaced them with super powered evil versions of themselves. Can your hapless duo find the schematics to that hoity-toity machine that shot their old selves into space before they get zapped? It's like a science experiment gone very wrong! Luckily you've got the herrr-mobile, TINYOSVR! Getting In To get your hands on this little bit of technology you'll first have to download OpenVR (it's free). Once that's done, OpenVR will install a program that will connect to the PC and install the PC version of the app. After that you'll have to go into Steam, find the URL for "Team Up VR" and press the "play" button. After a few moments you'll be out of VR. Now, leave that "install started" window and look in your Steam folder. The $59 game will be there waiting for you. Extract and launch the file, and you're good to go. Gameplay The story of Team Up VR is that you and your teammate have been hired by a mad robot scientist to find the missing schematics to his latest invention. The trouble is that the missing schematics aren't what you think they are. When the mad scientist turns his robot super strength on you and your friend, you're going to have to make a hasty retreat. Don't worry, it's not like the simulator Mr. Chung built at the Vinsanity lab in days of yore. This is a fully immersive, immersive simulator. Use the HMD, add controllers for secondary input, and you can walk about in the decayed bar while away from home. While exploring the bar, you have a mild dose of fear that the mad scientist's robots may suddenly do something nasty. But you break through their virtual prison and escape, and go back to Earth to save your boss and check the logs to make sure you have the schematics. The mission you're given is to explore the bar using the locomotion technology that they came up with - teleportation. This means that pressing the VR buttons will
