Acral fibrodysplasia ossificans progressiva (AFOP) is a rare, progressive disease of unknown cause with poor prognosis. Treatment is symptomatic and supportive with a multifaceted approach being considered. We present the case of a 16-year-old girl with AFOP who underwent a metatarsophalangeal (MTP) joint procedure for the treatment of focal progressive joint contracture of the MTP joint. She was discharged on prophylactic oral and topical nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory medication. At her 8-month follow-up, she had a complete range of
