I remember getting back from my last deployment and we got to Las Vegas to find my Girlfriend. I was in a bad state of mind and the idea of seeing her was a nice distraction from my PTSD at the time. Most importantly I didn't like to remember what happened that day and what her father said to me. I didn't want to let that affect my relationship with her. I did it a little bit, but never enough to ruin it. What kind of guy ruins it like this when he gets the girl? Am I a man to be scared to even look at a girl who didn't look the way I thought she would? Is there a way to know she's "the one"? Do I need to develop a system of what's acceptable and what isn't? And if I do, I want to know if I'm normal. And one last one, I was raised to know to never question someone's orientation, their sex life or if they're gay or not. They're who they are and that's enough. But are there legitimate reasons to not be OK with it? 4 Answers 4 Too different from what we'd expect from a normal relationship in a lot of ways. I wouldn't ask this question of anyone, but it seems to me like a lot of your doubts could be addressed by seeing her father. That would be a great thing for him to do, because then you'll know the truth for yourself. Also, if your girlfriend looks like a man, you should be fine -- if you're both straight -- unless she's transgender. What kind of guy ruins it like this when he gets the girl?
