The ruins of Azlant, a continent lost in a cataclysm that destroyed everything, lie scattered for thousands of miles under the icy waters of the Inner Sea. These ruins, which lie on the surface of the ocean and are roughly aligned with the longitude of the land, are the only places on the surface of Azlant. Find out why this continent has been left a desolate ruin of sharp peaks and jagged valleys, now frozen and cloaked in eternal darkness. Dive into the ruins of this forgotten world, and discover its ancient mysteries. What's new:

Romans in front, the lost traveller who died on the journey asks the average twit to help him, and the local gypsy tears off his fingers. Later he's locked up for theft, when the local nobleman questions him. This is a story that was in my mind for three years now. It's a period piece that revolves around a haunted ruin, ruins that were abandoned, and a city that was eventually destroyed by fire. At the end of World War One, a wealthy man turned his back on the town he had built and went abroad to join up. Many years later the average idiot returned to his hometown and found it gone and the rich man's wife was living in his mansion- if the titanic battle that followed was anything to go by. The ruins are filled to the brim with NPCs, with slots for 20 people into the dungeon, but only a handful will actually stay there for long. If you're serious about this kind of campaign, you're not going to be able to handle more than 4 people, and there are at least five people who will never go to the ruins. The rest between the 4 will probably stay for a long time, some even for ever. The damned ruins need a proper campaign. Dungeon levels don't need to stick, and there's plenty to do there. It's just that the whole setting is a dangerous place, and you need to be aware of all the issues. This is mostly written to work with Zelda's Game Guide System but it's mostly tested and modified for the Player's Handbook and the Monster Manual. But it's quite generic in many ways. The update is about 4 years old, isn't terrible but I have a couple of things I would like to change about the layout and description. I also just updated everything for 4.5. CROSSTHINKERS The Ruins in the Ruins of Azlant are a maze of 12 big rocks, three tall cliffs and one ruined by the sea. They are little more than a pile of rubble in a little patch of land. It's a haunted place, and without the proper equipment, it's the stuff of nightmares. As for wizards, they use a spell called, the vanishing tendrils of chaos to teleport, and most of the time, no creature could survive that. Most of them keep to the highest ground and to the north of the ruins. The place has been both
