Femoro-acetabular impingement syndrome (FAIS) is a cause of hip pain, limping and groin pain which is rarely described in the literature. Typical clinical and radiological findings are therefore used to diagnose FAIS. Treatment is primarily conservative. In advanced stages surgical treatment may be necessary. We present a case report of a young female patient, who presented with hip pain, limited walking and a Trendelenburg gait. An intraoperative diagnosis of FAIS was made. The patient was treated conservatively for 3 months with improvement. At follow up 4 months later she was pain-free and could walk without a limp.Q: QComboBox display a list of names in another ComboBox (PySide) I have 2 QComboBox on a PySide application window.
