In partnership with North Carolina's Division of Environmental Health, the CCS certification program teaches chemical-free education in grades Pre-K to 12, using teacher workshops and other school-based outreach.The program promotes a robust understanding of chemical substances in products, our environment, and our bodies through applied hands-on activities. By teaching our students about chemical substance exposure and their impacts on people and the environment, CCS education helps them make safer, healthier choices regarding their health and environment. Q: What do I need to get my school certified?A: Certification costs $500 for a four-year certification, $100 for the first year, and a yearly renewal fee of $200. Publicly-funded schools receive the same certification as charter schools. Q: Is this program for my school?A: The North Carolina Chemical Free Schools program is for schools that already have a chemistry program in place, have
