The co-stars of the upcoming Terminator reboot have given an update on their working relationships. Terminator star Jason Clarke has expressed that he would be "fine" if the reboot didn't turn out the way that they have, given that director Tim Miller is also the main creative force. Speaking to Vulture about the possibility that the reboot could possibly be a Hollywood misfire, Clarke stated: "All I can do is be myself and be happy with whatever happens. "I don't know the specifics of the situation because I haven't read the script; maybe it's a bizarre situation of him trying to exercise his own creative vision and cast it. That would be fine. I've got my thing. But he's my friend, and I'm comfortable with him. "And I'm sure
