I have an Excel 2007 xlsx file. I would like to set a hyperlink (to a website) to that file from a document. I set the hyperlink, then from another document I want to click on the link and go to a page on that website. However, when I get to the link in the original document, Excel opens it. So I can't actually click on the link. I can't figure out how to get Excel to not open the file for that particular hyperlink. Any ideas? A: You should be able to mark the file for not opening just as you have done to the link. You can specify the options for which extension to mark for - I think the option for not opening anything should be selected. . For the sake of simplicity, we do not discuss whether the proposed method is suitable for realistic scenarios where the GPS signal is blocked. ![Kinematic and inertial measurements from the GTA300 sensor.[]{data-label="fig:kinet_meas"}](img/kinematics_data.pdf){width="\columnwidth"} ![(a) Observed and (b) estimated values from the GPS sensors.
