We chose to focus primarily on using the following standard linux tools:
md5sum: This is an md5 (Message-Digest algorithm 5) hash function, which is used to verify the integrity of the software and files. ls /bin/ls/bin/: A file listing consisting of all the possible executables (named executables) that can be accessed from the root directory of an operating system. dir /dev/sd{a,b,c}: if it does not exist it's the device for the partition, i.e. its hard disk. It's the size of the partition. df -h: If the partition is listed, it's space used, if not it's free space, which may be calculated as size - capacity.
