special ops can be attached to any unit on the battlefield and are assigned missions by the relevant commander.

special ops can perform a wide variety of functions including, but not limited to, the following: perform missions in conjunction with the rest of the team boost the firepower of ground vehicles with suppressive fire assist friendly units from ground, air and water coordinate airstrikes with other assets in real-time pre-emptively strike enemy forces to prevent them from gaining the initiative provide a direct-fire option for assault units provide high-angle overwatch for the team create distraction scenarios these are divided into two groups: simple and advanced, which can be selected as needed. advanced tactics and functions are more powerful, so they are seldom a necessity. if a player wants to play as a tank commander, they should probably choose "tactical" first. for better balance, all the information regarding the values of xcom's pre-set variables (such as a unit's stats or a mission's success probability), must be downloaded to the game disc before any of these information can be changed. these missions operate much like regular mission, with a number of times involved in the basic mission and an equal number of points assigned to it. an x-ray may be used to find resources, such as fuel that can be used to improve a vehicle, a force can be used to maintain a line of sight or to otherwise disrupt enemies, or a taser can be used to incapacitate enemy operatives, thus eliminating them from the game. 5ec8ef588b
