License: Please contact us for licensing. Q: How to query database with a combination of two columns? I'm writing a function where the return type should be a bool. I want to return true if the first two chars of either of the first and last names in the database have the same value. If so, return true. I'm not sure what the best way to go about this would be, so any advice is appreciated. Thanks!

A: Use `string.match` with the parameter `"^"` and the pattern you want: `var r =`

`Regex.IsMatch(firstName.First(2),` `lastName.Last(2));`

A: An example of the query: `SELECT TOP 1 1`

FROM table WHERE CONVERT(VARCHAR(MAX), firstName + lastName) = CONVERT(VARCHAR(MAX), firstName + lastName) The above query can be used to find if two columns have the same data (string concatenation in this case).
You can use that in your function.
An alternate approach is to use the
IN operator, as follows: SELECT TOP 1 1 FROM table WHERE firstName IN (SELECT firstName FROM table) AND lastName IN

scanning electron microscopy. The fine structure of the human optic disc and peripapillary retina has been studied by scanning electron microscopy. The disc and parapapillary retina consist of a relatively flat portion (approximately 3 mm in diameter) with a slight curvature of the posterior pole. The retina lies more than 2 mm above the posterior pole of the optic nerve and is continuous with the nerve. The optic disc is covered with astrocytic processes and a group of capillaries, and contains a few pigment epithelial cells and blood cells. The peripapillary retina is mainly composed of capillaries and a layer of pigmented epithelial cells. The blood vessels form a dense capillary net in the region of the ciliary body, iris, and pars plana. In the peripapillary retina, the
