My question is what's the difference between them? What happens when someone uses them in the same cell? A: GPRS stands for GSM EDGE Radio Access Network whereas 2G stands for Second Generation of Global System for Mobile Communications. This is a single technology that allows for the exchange of data (packets) between user equipment (Cellphone, PDA) and a base station. It is one of the many technical details that led to 2G being called second generation. GPRS first appeared as a proof of concept around 1992. As far as we know, it was never deployed on a wide scale. This technology existed on the GSM core network level but was never deployed for the radio access control. I wouldn't call this technology obsolete but it was only deployed for network control. more complicated. Q: Spring Security - Custom authentication filter I am developing a web app which uses spring security. I want to apply custom authentication to a method. Here is what I did: I created a custom authentication-method: public class CustomAuthRequestAuthenticationProcessingFilter extends GenericFilterBean { @Override protected void doFilterInternal(HttpServletRequest request, HttpServletResponse response, FilterChain filterChain) throws ServletException, IOException { if (request instanceof HttpServletRequestWrapper) { HttpServletRequest requestWrapper = (HttpServletRequest) request; // Customize request if (requestWrapper.getMethod().equals("so meMethod")) { // custom authentication is performed here // // custom authentication is performed here // // Get
