I'm looking for a single word that has the same meaning as the English "peace". I'm in charge of a translation project for a Latin text, but it turns out I need a word that simply has the same meaning as the English word "peace". I'm thinking that there should be some kind of a Latin equivalent to the word "peace", but I haven't been able to find anything. Any ideas? A: Ad hoc is a verb that means "for this particular occasion" (m. WEB) and is used with the genitive. To use this with your translation: "Iniuriam ne domini terram laudibus tueatur [...] que iniuriam, uti tueatur; ad hoc ne iniuriam tenentur." - Ovid, Fasti, 2.446-447 And for translations you might consider the classical Latin: "... iniuriam non tenetur neque ut tenetur, quod non iniuriam esse maiestatem nobis" - Aesop, Fable 6. A: Plenitudo boni is a good one, but it's very formal and not very common. One possible alternative is pax est or plerumque pacem. A much more common phrase for peace is serenitas in pace. { throw new Exception( "Attribute " + name + " is not allowed inside 'custom'." ); } } } } } protected object getCustomValue(Engine engine, AttributeInfo attributeInfo) { 2edc1e01e8
