Camera RAW Improvements

One of the most significant things about Lightroom 5 is the inclusion of the new Camera RAW 5.8.6 update. In short, a lot has been achieved with this update. It includes the introduction of the new ACR U.S. Standard (ASE) profile. This allows the color calibration process to be more accurate resulting in rich, vibrant colors in photos.

The update also enables you to take photos with up to 32-bit color and a higher dynamic range. The update also allows for higher edit handling and significantly improved usability in the editing process, making your editing experience easier. Also, all of the existing Color Space Settings are now included. Photos with a white point between 2200 and 2400 Kelvin will have an even better tonal range that can now be achieved. Finally, the update for ACR CC includes new tools such as 'Auto' and 'Black & White.' These tools have been introduced to take care of various problems with images that have been captured by the camera while saving an enormous amount of time.

Also, the default speed for one of the editing tools, the 'Auto' tool, has been increased from the previous 500 milliseconds to 9000 milliseconds. This will take the time of editing drastically down. Another very significant enhancement is the addition of a 'Render Control Settings' option which allows you to easily set up your color and exposure settings for every image as desired.

Before they could see the updates, they could make suggestions that would have been overlooked if they had done the review in Photoshop or Lightroom. Review images appear in the panel shown up in the lower right where you can click to open the image in Photoshop.
