In an op-ed published Thursday in the Washington Post, the governors shared a strong desire to prevent more deaths like the ones that occurred at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, Conn., and at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Fla. But the governors were unified in rejecting the notion of an “assault weapons” ban, which now accounts for one-quarter of guns in the United States. Instead, the “gun sense” group of governors, as they are now calling themselves, agreed on a handful of common-sense steps. These include improving background checks; raising the age of gun purchases; banning the sale and possession of bump stock devices, the attachments that allow semiautomatic weapons to fire faster than possible; and establishing a National Association for Gun Rights for gun owners. “I heard people say that we need more regulations on guns,” said Gov. Chris Christie of New Jersey, who invited all nine governors to his home in November for an early look at his plan. “But I said, ‘You’ve got it exactly backward.’ It’s the only sensible thing we can do — what we’ve done for the last 20 years: No more federal government.”An oxygen-insensitive hollow-fiber luminescence oxygen sensor based on cobalt(II) terpyridyl-tetraphenylporphyrin-cored core-shell microfibers.
