I think the 4k real-estate issue is a good thing, ESW is much more intelligent than other applications. Stitching with cloth/matte is also an unique thing in the world, although I think the desktop version of the software updater is a bit annoying.

Great software, but it stinks in Windows 10. I am not sure what was changed in Windows 10 to make the handlebar (scroll wheel) so unusable. I cannot use it for navigating in Photoshop and the mouse wheel in other application uses the keyboard.

Performance was a concern with LR 5, but not as much as with the beta versions. There should be no problem coping with images shot at 4k if the computer has adequate resources and with a fast processor.

I found Lightroom 5 somewhat snappier than LR 4. I did notice a slight increase in latency when copying files into the catalog, but overall I still think LR 5 handles performance as well as LR 4

Loved this app for years until upgrading to Windows 10. Whenever I open Photoshop it crashes immediately. This behavior was never present in Windows 7 so I'm sure something is broken with the new UWP platform. Verified boot is off so it should not be a driver issue.

After some discussing on social media, Apple's new app features a cartoony design, a streamlined layout, a lack of buttons and a fully flat look. It's so simple and efficient that it has only 1 core feature: Buttons in the right side of the interface display a mode indicator next to the color mode, lighting, and effects you're using. This pops up in a translucent panel on every image in the workspace. This lets you know immediately what mode you're working in, and when you want to toggle through modes to choose the best photo editing option for a photo. Along with the increase in multitasking, a few of the new features in the 2020 version of Photoshop include a new brush, a brush engine improvement, a new printing engine and many more tweaks. Adobe is also updating the interface and icons, making it easier to navigate between windows and the options panel. They are including a host of new editing improvements, as well as a new program that makes it way much easier to edit the resolution of images. Here are the top New features in the Photoshop CC 2020 version: Smart Photo and PDF - The Smart Photo and PDF is a new app built in Photoshop that uses artificial intelligence to make good photos look better. It's made to automatically recognize and learn elements like glass, snow, clouds, grass and trees. If the AI finds it thinks the photo is missing these, it will suggest a batch of options for the photographer to choose from. In addition to the AI, the app also features some of Photoshop's top computing power. A 2.8 GHz CPU, 16GB RAM, and a high-speed hard drive is ample power for this AI-powered photo processing tool.
