Jana Lee Miller and husband Henry Miller have chosen to pay former patient and good friend Michael Blatchford $30 million after a judgment was determined to be fair and reasonable. From 2003 to 2009, Miller, a former Florida resident, was a patient of Blatchford's Addiction Specialty Clinic. Miller worked at the clinic at the time. Blatchford was hired by Miller's psychiatrist and lawyer, Thomas Witt, to give Miller the option of a brain implant to treat a psychological disorder. Witt testified that Miller was "unable to function and required constant supervision and constant efforts for self-care." In August 2010, Blatchford, who was hired as a testifying expert by Miller's lawyer, testified that the implant was not approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. Blatchford later changed his opinion to state that the implant was approved by the FDA. Miller took issue with Blatchford's revised opinion, saying Blatchford was negligent by not providing her with
