The present invention relates to a new and distinct cultivar of Hydrangea arborescens and will be referred to hereafter by its cultivar name, 'TMGS 93'. 'TMGS 93' represents a new horse-chestnut, an herbaceous perennial grown for landscape use. 'TMGS 93', a new and distinct cultivar of Hydrangea, was developed in the Inventor's test garden in Zuidwolde, The Netherlands in 2000 by controlled breeding of Hydrangea arborescens 'GRAPINA SOWBODDE' (not patented) as the male parent and Hydrangea arborescens 'MOLLESIN' (not patented) as the female parent. The seeds resulting from the above cross were collected and sown in 2000 in Zuidwolde, The Netherlands. The seedling that exhibited the unique characteristics that set it apart from other known cultivars was selected in 2001 and given the name 'TMGS 93'. The new cultivar was first asexually propagated by softwood stem cuttings in 2001 in Zuidwolde, The Netherlands and has been asexually propagated by softwood stem cuttings since that time. 'TMGS 93' has been found to retain its distinctive characteristics through successive generations of asexual propagation.
